What VPN servers should I choose from the list of available server locations?A. The closer the server to your location, the better the data transfer rates you can expect. The list of available servers includes all the main locations, but you can also choose a country where the VPN server is not listed. Use the search option or simply pick one of the servers. Q. Why do I need to pay a subscription fee in order to connect to a server?A. Each server needs a subscription to keep the service running. Currently, the subscription rates depend on the location you need the VPN server. If you happen to be outside of one of the available countries, it may be cheaper to buy the subscription in advance and use it only during the time you need it. Q. Will the app upload my browsing data to the RA4W VPN server?A. The RA4W VPN application will not upload any data to the server. The RA4W VPN server only collects data about your activity. Q. What is the difference between the paid subscription and a free trial?A. The paid subscription option gives you access to unlimited servers, while the free trial limits you to 12 servers. The paid subscription includes the "UltraVPN" plan. This plan requires a monthly subscription fee, while the "UltraVPN Plus" plan is paid annually, with the option of extending your subscription. When the first US military staff came to the commanding general of the US occupation troops in Iraq in January, 2002, they asked him to prepare a list of tasks to do over the next six months to turn Iraq into a functioning state. As the name of the list, the general chose "the Plan." In the early 2000s, the US was actively training and arming militias in both Afghanistan and Iraq. They worked with a variety of groups and local forces, including the various Arab and Kurdish groups fighting the Islamic State (ISIS) to oust it from their respective countries. The US military and its NATO allies are about to launch a large-scale military operation called "Operation Artemis" in northern Iraq. The troops are positioned in northern Iraq, but their ultimate destination is Syria. They plan to mount an operation in areas controlled by Kurdish forces in north of Syria.
